Abstract: This time, the researchers tried to interpret the same poem of Tcheonzamun 465th–480th for the second time. The translation will be done through the meaning of Chinese character for the same Tcheonzamun poem (465th-480th). The second line is: 1) My husband, do you want me, your wife, who is the principle (聿) of our family. 2) To be relax and to be happy (休) ? 3) There is one (一) tiny little (幺) thing for you to do (工), my husband! 4) The tiny little thing is “truly (十), and truly (十) it will not (尸) be occurred (立)!”. Keywords: Tcheonzamun 465th-480th, the second time, the translation will be done through the meaning of Chinese character.

INTRODUCTION
Dallet (1874) wrote in his book that Tcheonzamun (The thousand character essay) was used as the textbook for the children’s education for Chinese characters. Dallet (1874) described that this education occurred in ancient China for example in Tchin (秦) and in ancient Korea. The present researchers translated several Tcheonzamun poems (Park and Kim, 2017; Park et al., 2021). The present researchers translated the Tcheonzamun 465th-480th (Park et al., submitted in 2021), and it was done through Korean pronunciation. This time, the researchers tried to interpret the same poem of Tcheonzamun 465th-480th for the second time. The translation will be done through the meaning of Chinese character for the same Tcheonzamun poem (465th-480th).

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION
This time, the researchers tried to interpret the poem of Tcheonzamun 465th-480th for the second time. The translation will be done through the meaning of Chinese character for the same Tcheonzamun poem (465th-480th).
